Dear Judge McLaughlin,

My name is Jason Foisy and for the last 6 years I have worked as Andrew Mogilyansky's Logistics/Office Manager as well as his personal assistant. I have worn many hats over the years, including that of an IT guy, office manager, AR/AP accountant, maintenance guy, data entry clerk and whatever else Andrew needed me to do that day.

Over the last 6 years, I have developed two relationships with Andrew. That of an employee and that of a friend. As an employer, Andrew has always been extremely generous with me and treated me with the utmost respect. I felt comfortable speaking my mind and making suggestions about the day to day run of the company. In Andrew's business practice, I've always seen him conduct himself in a professional and fair manner. Fair, sometimes to his own detriment, but he always believed that if you treated everyone fairly in business, then you could maintain a long lasting business relationship with them. He did this so well, that many of these business relationships turned into personal friendships.

I, myself, developed one of these personal friendships with Andrew. We share a similar sense of humor, which helped in the days that we would spend 12-15 hours together. I could talk to Andrew about anything regarding my personal life and he would give me whatever guidance he could. A lot of times this guidance helped me solve issues in my life that I could not find the answers to.

Andrew is one of the, if not the most, intelligent and charismatic person I've ever met, and for these reasons he became a mentor to me, to the point where he is almost like an older brother figure. This is the reason that I asked him to be a groom's man in my wedding, which he accepted and at which he gave a heart felt and meaningful speech.

Andrew is also one of the most generous people I've ever met. This came through most clearly in how much time he devoted to the charity for the Beslan school massacre. He devoted hours upon hours to raise money for these kids, despite the fact that this put our own business on hold for that time. He did not care though. He was all about helping people. Even when he got to meet famous actors through his foundation, he did not care. To him, it was about the people in need, he could care less about the celebrity of the whole ordeal. This was when I was most proud. I was so proud to work for, and to help out in the slightest ways, someone that was really making a difference in the world. A lot of people talk about doing things to help others, but he really did it. Andrew is a great person and I hope that this letter helps you see that a little more clearly. Thank you very much for taking the time to read and consider my letter.
