Dear Judge McLaughlin,

My name is Vasyl Hlushchuk, I live in Rivne, Ukraine, and I am Andrew's father-in-law. I am the Managing Director of Rivne Region Post Office Department "UkrPoshta." I would like to express my respect to you and take this opportunity to share with you my opinion about my son-in-law Andrew Mogilyansky.

My daughter Oksana is married to Andrew, they have three kids together, and I, my wife, and our relatives are very happy about this. During many years that I have known Andrew, I have gotten to know him very well, and can sincerely and with confidence say that I admire him as a son-in-law, father, businessman, and a human being. I believe my life experience allows me to speak this way. I am 59 years old. For the past 30 years, I have been working in top management positions in various district and regional government organizations. My extensive experience working with people on different levels and success that I achieved in my work allow me to believe I have good judgment of character. I know how to and can sense faults and insincerities.

Andrew is a wonderful, open, easy-going and well-mannered person, who is ready to extend a helpful hand not only to people close to him, but complete strangers. He has demonstrated this multiple times during the time I have known him. He is also a sincere, honest and stable individual. He is, however, often not demanding enough of his business partners, and is sometimes overly trustful.

He loves very much my daughter Oksana, his children Daniel, Anna and Julia, and our family, for which he has earned a lot of respect by all our relatives and friends.

Your Honor, as the father of my daughter and the grandfather of my grandkids, I sincerely ask you to take my opinion and request into your consideration and be lenient to Andrew.

I am convinced that the lesson that life taught him will ensure that he will target all his future deeds only at making his family stronger, raising his children, and doing hard work for the wellbeing of the society.

Respectfully,

/Signature/
