Dear Judge McLaughlin,

I have known Andrew Mogilyansky for 20 years. Being a very close friend of Andrew's father I had chance to witness many events and had many conversations with Andrew and now I would like to share my observations with you.

My name is David Vodovoz. Currently I am working as a systems analyst for ESSI (Eastern Software Strategies, Inc.) and over the last 30 years I worked on a number of software development projects in Human Services, Educational, and Financial industries in Philadelphia region.

Andrew was 17 years old when I met him first time shortly after his (and Andrew's father) arrival to USA . I still vividly remember how much I was impressed with his knowledge, intelligence, articulation skills. Very soon I observed other Andrew's qualities – hard worker (for about a year he worked next to me when I tried to start my own business) and responsibility – he was supporting his father for a while.

One year after Andrew and his father arrived to USA , Andrew became a student of Columbia University in NYC. I visited Andrew at university dorm. It was hard to imagine how Andrew managed all his affairs – study at Columbia maintaining highest grades (even taking extra classes) and at the same time coming back to Philadelphia to work Friday nights, Saturdays, and Sundays. Andrew had not only brilliant head but very capable hands as well. Being very enthusiastic about personal computers he helped all our friends with software and hardware installation, configuration and fixing everything from watches and up to computers.

Over the years I have been seeing Andrew and his family. His once-busy business travel pattern has drastically changed when he got married and got three beautiful children. Andrew never projected anything less than being responsible, caring and loving son, husband and father.

Andrew is a caring, outgoing person. His achievements, outstanding and exemplary in many instances, reveal his potentials. With no hesitation I offer my character reference convinced that Andrew will be able to contribute to society and will have great achievements despite the present challenges. Thank you.

Respectfully,

David Vodovoz
